THIS IS US

THIS IS OUR WORK

See staff and board list on page 16

2020 was a year that defined us in many ways.

It brought to the forefront the vast inequities many black, brown, LGTBQ, immigrant, and differently-abled communities face daily. The pandemic evolved into a humanitarian crisis that exacerbated these inequities in ways many of us could never have imagined. The access to food, technology, COVID-19 testing, or the simple opportunity to access information via phone became an issue affecting several communities.

2020 provided more clarity about the barriers and obstacles we must overcome and the systems we must dismantle. It shows us the way we must design tools that support our most vulnerable.

2020 brought out the best in us and encouraged us to continue to advocate to create change for our communities, our neighborhoods, our state, and our country. We can measure direct results from working collaboratively to make positive change.

In this spirit of collaboration and determination, the LCF Georgia seized the opportunity that 2020 presented to us to be that change maker in Georgia, our state. From the board of directors to its volunteers, every one of us understood that our mission became doing all we could to provide relief to the thousands and thousands of families facing eviction, hunger, illness, death, despair, and fear and mitigate the expansion of the virus.

The LCF Georgia team worked in parallel to ensure that the direct relief paired with critical education on our civil and human rights and recognized the policies directly responsible for the realities we were living at home, at work, with loved ones. From ensuring visibility and voice through the monumental effort to get everybody counted at the decennial census, to the massive mobilization during general and Senate runoff elections, our team, and yes, I am including our member organizations, and showed out.

I am deeply honored to have served as Chair of the Board during such a significant period in our lives. I am thankful for the support of my fellow board members joining in food distribution efforts, fundraising for rental support, text banking, and education. The hands-on commitment to do the work has defined our organization as a community of diverse leaders unafraid of owning our responsibility and willing to do the job.
